THE JAP INFLUX

The objection of the people of the Coast cities to the Japanese influx is not founded on present industrial conditions. It is not because there is no work there to be done, nor because the Japanese are physically or by disposition unfitted to do the work. Rather the contrary. Work is plentiful and the Japanese are both willing and able to do it. Millmen, lumbermen, mine operators, railway companies are calling for help and the Japanese are both anxious and capable to fill the demand. Unlike the Hindu who was contentedly confined to live and work in the more rigorous climate of his northern latitudes, the Jap is born in these latitudes. Whereas the Hindu was an absolute stranger to the appliances and methods of Canadian industrial life the Jap has been made an industrial paragon at home in many cases, and besides displays an adaptability altogether foreign to the Hindu. The Hindu was contented largely through pity, in the belief that he had been lured to a country for which he was unfitted; the Japanese requires no such protection, he is simply that it is an influx. Not that hostility would be shown to a similar movement of white and desirable immigrants; but the presence of immigrants not being desirable, their undesirableness is increased according to their number. As one Vancouver paper puts it, "There are fortunate communities in which the number of them of them want to come to British Columbia. Recognizing this fact, the remarkable rapidity with which they have flocked into the province during the past few months the Coast people are disposed to think there is some authority or influence behind the scenes and that the influx instead of being a voluntary movement of those seeking better conditions on their own responsibility, is being engineered by some unknown power, perhaps for reasons far other than simply the betterment of the conditions of the immigrants. This suspicion of an unseen force governing the movement has created a feeling of uneasiness and uncertainty in the public mind which the continuance of the rush might easily convert into popular alarm and even into social and industrial panic."

Representations have been made to the Federal government and the Premier is said to have been called to the attention of Japan to an agreement by which the government of that country bound itself to permit only a stipulated number of Japanese to migrate to Canada each year. This is complicated, however, by the fact that the Japs do not come direct from Japan to Canada, but first land in the Hawaiian Islands and thence to Vancouver and Victoria. The islands being United States territory the Japanese Government of course has no authority over Japanese residents in the islands, and in keeping them from going wherever they please. Apparently no limit is placed upon the number of Japs who may migrate to the islands. Except an immigrant for the islands admits his intention of proceeding to Canada it is difficult to see how the Canadian Government could prevail on the Japanese Government to prevent him going to the United States. Another difficulty is the Japanese commercial treaty with Great Britain and which was ratified by Canada. This guarantees the subjects of each country against interference or discrimination in the territory of the other. Presumably however the agreement between Canada and Japan limiting Jap immigration holds even over this treaty and if so can be made to operate the difficulty of the treaty is avoided. The only way in any event the question is not one to be settled in a day, and any such settlement can be delayed but not expedited by heated discussions or displays of prejudice.

In the question of the exclusion of the Japanese Alberta has fortunately no direct interest, but we are vitally concerned in the method by which their exclusion is gone about. While having every sympathy with the people of British Columbia in their efforts to preserve their province as a white man's country we have no desire that this worthy purpose be accomplished in a manner that will result disastrously to our own province. Alberta wants the Japanese trade and hopes to build up with eastern empire a large and profitable commerce. We have no desire to do so at the sacrifice of British Columbia's interest; but neither have we any desire that these ambitions of Alberta be sacrificed by trying to attain the purpose of British Columbia in the wrong way. We want the Japanese trade, but we do not want the Japanese exclusion. We want the people, if we can exclude the people and preserve the trade, the interests of both provinces will be served to the best advantage. This is the method which Canada's efforts should be directed and that that end may be attained judgment and diplomacy must be displayed by the Government and patience and reasonableness by the people.

THE QUEBEC CATASTROPHE.

The awful loss of life in the collapse of the Quebec bridge adds another to the series of catastrophes which have shocked humanity in recent years. Eighty-four men are believed to have perished in the waters of the St. Lawrence, only eight escaping of the ninety-two working on the section that went down. The sympathy of the Canadian people will go out to the relatives and dependants of the unfortunate men, and the sympathy will not be denied by the government in tangible assistance where such is required. In disasters of this character this is all humanity can do, and that humanity is bound to do.

MIXING THINGS UP.

At Halifax Mr. Berden had hardly concluded his declaration of independence for the provinces, their powers, privileges and rights, when Mr. Bergeron arose to deliver an address described as "brilliant" by the party press. It is a safe guess that the brilliance had a different hue than the sentiments expressed in this same Mr. Bergeron delivered during the closing days of the session. Or if it had not Mr. Berden must have prayed for deliverance from such tirades. On that occasion Mr. Bergeron attested his admiration for the provincial arrangement and his undying respect for provincial rights and powers in an address of which the following is a fairly representative paragraph: "But the 'federal' governments have gone 'expensive.' They have created debts. 'According to the intention of the fathers of confederation the provinces and powers were not to run into debt. It is true they were granted a few dollars of revenue as 'has been mentioned here and there' but they were supposed to 'gather their revenue mainly through direct taxation.' . . . 'The money comes from the longer you 'will prevent them from resorting to direct taxation, and only in that case will the people regard them as 'the money comes from and where it goes.' If the Halifax address of Mr. Bergeron was along the same line as this deliverance it surely made an impression of one kind or another."

ON THE SIDE.

An editor was drowned while bathing—a solemn warning. The Saskatchewan again rises to remind us that we have no filtration system.

Canada has risen for millions of unemployed; but for the same purpose.

The C. P. may build a line from Edmonton through the Yellowhead. Just forty years behind time.

A fishery inspector has found a new species of mackerel near Victoria, B.C. It lives in the water.

British Columbia plans have not advanced in price over last season. This must be an oversight.

Railways say he wants "justice, justice, justice." Well he needs it; he's impatient. It's coming his way.

Insurance companies are refusing Montreal risks on account of inadequate water supply. And the city is built on an island.

A press despatch vaguely remarks that the new Sultan of Morocco "has always shown himself a friend of France." Very likely.

Complaint is made that Canada sends green cheese to England. England might much rather buy by sending green hankies to Canada.

The cheerful thought about the western crop is that the anxious ones are the dwellers in cities. The farmer is waiting no time having a dollar's worth of grain.

As J. H. Hill: "The investors cannot be induced to put out their money 'Canada' because they are so busy consulting in knowing that Jim is up against it."

TWO SIDES OF THE QUESTION.

The development of the country depends as much—more so—upon the importation of white labor as it does upon the exclusion of the Oriental. The man the mill, work the mine and clear the land, we have them. The matter is to settle and develop our agricultural resources and build up a population of Canadians. If the whites are not Canadians when they come here, we can make Canadians of them. But Orientals will be Orientals till the end of time.

We need not worry about the class of whites who will come here. On that point, at least, the east is alive. We can leave the working of the immigration laws to take care of the selection. If undesirable come in the remedy may be easily applied by proving the authenticity of the immigration laws.

It is reported that Hon. Frank Oliver has already taken practical steps looking to sending large numbers of white laborers to British Columbia. Let the British Columbia people wonder for the future of a white British Columbia today than 100,000 could do ten years hence. Ten thousand men in British Columbia today would be the place most of the Orientals now employed in mills, mines, forests and on the coast.

British Columbia needs white labor today more than it needs money. It needs white labor to build up the work because of labor scarcity. Railways construction is being held back for lack of labor.

The 2,000 Japs of recent arrival were snuggled up and packed at once. The Japs and development of the province demands a white influx with delay. No letter proof of the scarcity of labor of all kinds could be addressed to the white influx with delay.

Let the hearty and untainted support of the white people of this province be extended to Hon. Frank Oliver in his effort to give us a supply of white labor. The man who raised his voice in protest against his importation stamps himself as a patriotic, short-sighted and a party man. The man who raised his voice in the perpetration of a condition which will make cooler labor an absolute necessity in British Columbia. The only way to keep British Columbia a white man's country is to bring white men to it in numbers sufficient to do the work to be done.

There is not a line of industry in British Columbia today that is not short-handed. Skilled mechanics are wanted in almost every branch of industry. British Columbia needs not only white laborers but white mechanics. Wages are higher in British Columbia than in any other province in Canada. Living conditions are better in British Columbia than in any other province. Cost of living is higher than in any other. It is an ideal workman's country.

We need workers of every class. The facts be known broadcast, that while men of every trade can find work and plenty of good wages in British Columbia, the most beautiful of all the new countries in the world.

OLIVER AND THE JAPANESE. (Winnipeg Tribune.) The Japs are coming here to make the attempt to drag the Japanese question in British Columbia into party politics, where it no more belongs than it does in astronomy.

When interviewed by The Tribune on Saturday, Mr. Oliver made it clear that he fully appreciated the seriousness of the problem that faces not only British Columbia, but Canada and Great Britain, and was so frank as to admit that he had no cut and dried solution ready at present.

This attitude does not satisfy the journal that professes to be Conservative, but would rather consider the interests of the Dominion and the empire far above a party's advantage.

The Japanese question in British Columbia is one of the most serious and difficult problems that could be faced by the ally of Great Britain. Great Britain and Japan have also agreed that it is necessary to regulate immigration—and Canada has officially agreed to do so.

Since these relations between the north country and Japan were established, the great influx of Japanese started in British Columbia—and because of these relations, but it is suspected, in defiance of the treaty, that it is Canada to do in the circumstances. Give British Columbia a free hand and tell it to go ahead and ignore national and imperial interests by refusing to permit the Japanese to land.

It is the "solution" that the Winnipeg Tribune proposes—but it is not a solution that anyone who desires to Canada take the best and able and patriotic course can endorse. What Canada must first ascertain is whether these Japanese who come to us from the island possessions of the empire are really the Pacific have complied with the terms of the treaty—terms that prevent more than a certain number of Japanese coming to Canada direct from their native country.

But that permit others who have become bona-fide residents of our country to come without—literally. If, as is freely charged, those that are now coming from American possessions are merely leaving Japan for Canada and coming by way of an other country for the purpose of evading the provisions of the treaty between Japan and Great Britain, the Canadian Government can take steps that will stop the invasion. But first, however, it will be necessary to ascertain whether this is what is going on or not.

It is on the other hand, these people have complied with the terms of the treaty, it will be probably be necessary for Canada to work through the British Government to receive a check of the fraud that is causing such protest at the Pacific coast.

Taking all the circumstances into consideration, any far-sighted man will easily see that the best and most delicate, and that it demands the most careful handling—which will take time.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, SATURDAY, AUGUST 31, 1907.

Mr. Oliver deserves no criticism for his attitude towards it, only a very small portion would suggest an immediate remedy, where the consequences of a false diploma of legislative care would be no far-reaching bad result.

FROM DUELLIST TO A SHEPHERD

Peaceful End of Desperado whose Career was Marked by Turmoil and Bloodshed.

Fort Worth, Texas, Aug. 29.—Don Jose Canadano, at one time one of the bravest warriors and most notorious outlaws of Spain and Mexico, died a few days ago on the Helton ranch, and was buried at the foot of the mountains on Texas soil.

Canadano was born of one of the most noble and respected families in Madrid. His ancestors had been generals in the army and he was educated in Spain for an officer. Through some companionship he fell into bad habits and the army held out for him a position for the army in France in order that he might not be tempted by his old associates in Madrid.

Young Canadano soon became a favorite of the French military school. He had a passion for the sword, rifle and pistol, and he became one of the best swordsmen and marksmen in the nation.

At twenty-one Canadano was graduated from the army and was given the Spanish army with the rank of captain. But habits governed him and he became a frequent frequenter of gaming houses and wine shops.

Kills Two in Duel. One evening while in a cafe party was interrupted, Canadano got into a dispute with two of his companions, who were also in the cafe. They were both armed with pistols and Canadano was not his usual self. He then said he would not fight single unless they agreed if the first man killed him the second would give his dying body with the sword in his hand, but help might appear their lives.

It required just three minutes for Canadano to pierce the first young man through the neck and kill him. He then stabbed the second man in the chest and he died in a few minutes before being lifted by a thrust through the body and Canadano's only wound was on his wrist arm.

An anecdote was related at the head of the funeral service, that it meant death if he remained in Spain, he fled to France, and from that country went to Mexico where he lived under the name, where he conducted himself with great honor.

Heads Bandits. After Maximilian was defeated Canadano called together twenty-five of the most desperate men of his command and organized them as bandits. For twenty-five years this band was the terror of the villages in the mountains of Mexico. They swept down upon the villages burning houses, robbing stores and killing every man woman whom they carried away to their hideouts. But when the Mexican revolution broke out they crowded the bandits, killed many of them, and within two years only a few remained. It was when only five were left that Canadano decided to go to the United States and give them permission to go there. He himself disappeared and was never again heard of on Mexican soil.

Out on the Helton ranch in the western part of Texas it was fifteen years ago that a tall, long-headed old man, named with perfect manners and baritone voice, made his appearance. He asked for work and was given employment. Though very old he was vigorous and made an ideal shepherd for his flock of sheep kept on the ranch, and his identity was never known to be disclosed and he had not once been disturbed to freely and revealed it all to some of his Mexican companions.

But no one then interfered with the man of old habit, and a shadow lived on his allotted time without molestation from any source. Finally he was asked to leave, and a shadow lived on his allotted time without molestation from any source. Finally he was asked to leave, and a shadow lived on his allotted time without molestation from any source.

Men With Nerve and Row Died. On August 22.—The identity of the man found dead in a sleeping car of the North & Rowe train has not yet been discovered. The man's name cannot be found out. He was picked up on in Saskatchewan and taken to the foot of the mountains, and it is here the man's spirit has finally found rest.

NEW YORK WILL PAY HIGH RATE

On $40,000,000 Issue of Bonds—Forces Them on Unwilling Market.

New York, Aug. 30.—Bids will be opened on Sept. 10 for the biggest bond offering yet made by the City of New York. City bonds and corporate stock amounting to $40,000,000 and bearing an interest rate of 4½ per cent will be offered to investors.

Wall street did not act as kindly to the prospect of such a heavy demand upon its resources, but reports quickly spread that many of the leading financial houses had joined in the organization of a syndicate to bid for the entire issue. This enhanced a feeling of confidence and the various attractive features of the issue received more consideration. The seller was at once communicated to the stock market, and prices advanced rapidly and stocks closed strong.

No definite statement could be obtained from the leading banks, but it was reported on apparently good authority that J. P. Morgan & Co. and other financial houses were interested in the plan.

It was pointed out that the banking interests realized that a failure of this kind would affect the interest rate had been advanced to 4½ per cent, but it was said to be desirable for that reason it was considered expedient in many quarters in the financial district that the city loan would be a success because leading financiers realized that it had to be a success.

The fact that the offering is so large induced the belief that the committee's office had obtained assurance from banking interests that the securities would be taken or that some arrangement had been made to prevent the sale from being a failure. The last sale, one for $20,000,000 and the other for $10,000,000 worth of 4 per cent bonds, were unsuccessful, and that fact had an unpleasant effect on the financial circles.

This Experience May be Yours

"I have taken a full course in Bookkeeping and Northland at Alberta College. I am well satisfied with the course of training and know that I am worth as much to my employers than I was previously. I may say that I found the teachers always willing to help me in any difficulty and they were very thorough in their training."
